

Solutions and practical options to guide national ‘green development’ action plans

The Global Assessment of Bamboo and Rattan (GABAR) is an initiative of INBAR on behalf of its 41 member countries. It shares the knowledge of national bamboo and rattan institutes and experts worldwide. The initiative is creating a knowledge base of practical information, tools and policy guidance that countries and development partner can use to guide investments in bamboo for job creation and green economy plans.

GABAR produces and shares options and examples for using bamboo and rattan resources in national green development plans. It highlights benefits such as rural development and job creation; private sector development; product and business value chains for rural areas; cases and scenarios; rapid landscape restoration approaches; or climate-smart activities made possible with bamboo that are being applied today at national and village level.

Solutions and practical options to guide national ‘green development’ action plans

The Global Assessment of Bamboo and Rattan (GABAR) is an initiative of INBAR on behalf of its 41 member countries. It shares the knowledge of national bamboo and rattan institutes and experts worldwide. The initiative is creating a knowledge base of practical information, tools and policy guidance that countries and development partner can use to guide investments in bamboo for job creation and green economy plans.

GABAR produces and shares options and examples for using bamboo and rattan resources in national green development plans. It highlights benefits such as rural development and job creation; private sector development; product and business value chains for rural areas; cases and scenarios; rapid landscape restoration approaches; or climate-smart activities made possible with bamboo that are being applied today at national and village level.

